Christie is the Non-Executive Chair of HatchBeauty, the first U.S.-based vertically integrated incubator that co-creates quasi-exclusive beauty and wellness brands with and for retailers using high-tech data sources “Hatch is a great example of that gender diversity advantage because 40% of our board directors are women, which clearly fuels the agile creative thinking that distinguishes Hatch.”

With 300+ senior professionals, C-Suite executives, and corporate board directors attending this networking and educational event to promote further corporate board gender diversity, this event is a celebration open to the public and designed for learning about and growing a corporate board career.

HatchBeauty is a great example of how private companies are recognizing the value of gender diversity on their boards—in fact, about 50% of those corporate board directors at the 2020 Women on Boards Chicago event are also on private company boards as the demand by private companies for board diversity grows—it’s an emerging trend.

“Yes, we’re unusual now in that Hatch has both a woman Chair and a woman CEO,” says Christie, “but that kind of leadership is exactly what the beauty business should be defined by in this new century.”
